What is an upper endoscopy?
An upper endoscopy lets your doctor look at the lining of your esophagus (the tube that goes from your mouth to your stomach), your stomach, and the first part of your small intestine.

During the exam, a flexible tube, about the width of a little finger, will be placed into your mouth and down into your stomach and small intestine. This tube will not get in the way of your breathing.

What to Expect
• You will receive general anesthesia (sleeping medicine) and will be asleep during the exam.
• Your doctor may take small tissue samples called biopsies. Your doctor may also dilate (expand) narrow areas or stop bleeding inside your small intestine.
• This test will take only about 15 minutes, but you will be in the hospital longer than that, to allow time for you to prepare for the exam and recover afterward.

How do I get the test results?
When you wake up after the procedure, your doctor will talk with you about the results. If your results are not ready right after the exam, we will tell you when you can expect to receive them.
