

Bariatric Hydrating Liquids: 2-3 Weeks After Surgery

Drinking your hydrating liquids after bariatric surgery is very important in order to avoid dehydration, protect kidney function, and avoid nausea.

Daily Goal

Hydrating liquids are the most important nutrient of your day. Slowly sip 60 ounces. This is:

- 4 bottles that are 15 ounces each
- Or 2 bottles that are 30 ounces (about 1 liter)
- Or an 8-ounce cup, 8 times a day

Remember to drink slowly: Take 1 full hour to sip 8 ounces, 8 times a day.

Why do I need to drink so much?

- Dehydration can cause nausea, muscle pain, leg cramps, headache, poor sleep, and dizziness when standing up.
 - Read more about dehydration symptoms on page 71 of your Weight Loss and Metabolic Surgery Guidebook.
- Staying hydrated may improve weight loss, help with constipation, and reduce joint pain.
- If you cannot drink at least 48 ounces each day for 2 days in a row, call 206.598.2274.

About Hydrating Liquids

- Hydrating liquids do not have sugar, caffeine, or protein.
- It is easier to drink water with electrolytes or alkaline drops better than plain water.
- For more ideas, see the handout, “Hydrating Liquids”.

How and When to Sip

- Slowly sip all hydrating liquids between your protein liquid meals.
- Wait 30 minutes before and 30 minutes after each liquid protein meal to sip on hydrating liquids.
- To help with pain, avoid using straws or gulping, even if your mouth is dry.
- If it hurts to drink cold water, try drinking room-temperature water.
- You are drinking enough if you do not have any headaches, muscle cramping, or nausea.
